The Internet: Friend or Foe?

The Internet has changed the way we live. We use it to find out information, community with each other, entertain ourselves, and do our shapping. But people often tell us to a careful on the internet. Why? Is the Internet our triend (/) or fee [4]?

The Internet is great for doing our homework.

Access to the Internet gives us access to the world. With over a billion websites, it is a great research tead for our homework. Whatever we are researching, from astronouts to zebras, there will be some information about it on the Internet, And because websites can be updated easily and quickly, most of the information will be Upstandate.

× Information on the Internet isn't reliable.

Information on the Internet isn't always reliable. When a nonfiction book is published, the publishers check the information it contains. Anyone can past their opinions or write an anoline article, and no one checks the focts. When researching on the Internet, we doways have to make sure the information that we find is true. What ways of checking this information can you think of?

Social media connects us to friend

Being connected to the Internet means we can use social media, which is a great way of staying in touch with our friends. Social media allows us to past photos and send messages to aur friends wherever we are. So even when we're not with them, we know what our friends are doing. Many young people think they are closer to their friends because of this technology.

X Social media makes us feel lonely.

However, social media can also make us feel lonely. If we spend too much time online, we don't spend enough time with our friends and family offline. Some people think that specific riendships oren't as trong as face-to-face friendships. We need to spend time with real friends—talking, laughing, and having fun.

Sacial media can also make us compare our lives to other people's. People usually only post positive information. Our lives seem more boring in comparison, and this can make us feel sad.

Why is it important to connect online only with people we already know in real life?

🔪 🗸 The Internet is an online playgrou

The Internet is great for entertainment. We can watch videos, listen to music, and even create our own videos and music, And of course, we can play online games. With so many exciting and creative games to download and share with our friends, the Internet is an online playground.

Playing these games might be goad for us, too. Some research has shown that children who play computer games for up to one hour a day are happier and more sociable than children who don't. Concentrating and making fast decisions as we play also develops our problem-solving skills.

> Other research has shown that spending too much time online is bad for our health. We are becoming physically weaker because we don't get enough exercise outside. Outdoor activities tike playing soccer and climbing trees build up muscle and keep us healthy and strong. If we spend too much time sitting down, our bodies build up more for than muscle, so we become less healthy.

Too much screen time can affect our evenight. And overusing keyboards and controllers can cause problems with small hand movements, which we need for writing and other important tasks.

Internet shopping is very convenient

Whatever we want to buy, we can find it easily and quickly on the Internet. We can buy tickets for a movie, make reservations for a vacation, or find the perfect present for our best friend. We have a greater variety of things to buy, and we can also buy them more cheaply. We can compare products from different online stores to find the best price. We dan't even have to travel to the stores—we can just have what we buy delivered to our door.

* Internet shopping destroys our towns.

However, if we do all our shopping online, local stores and small companies will go out of business. Our downtowns will be empty, and many people will lose their jobs. In addition, more trucks on our roods delivering our shopping is bad for traffic and the local environment.

So what do you think? Is the Internet a friend or fae, or perhaps somewhere in the middle?

What activities do you like doing online and affline? Do you think you need to reduce the time you spend online?
